Wald, Ruhnke & Dost Architects, LLP (WRD) recently welcomed back Interior Designer Sara Simoni to the regional full-service firm, which serves California's Central Coast.

"We're excited to have Sara as a part of our team again," said Principal Henry Ruhnke. "She is a tremendous talent – able to improve people's days and lives through compelling design."

Simoni began her career with WRD as a junior interior designer while completing her associate degree from Monterey Peninsula College. She played key roles in multiple projects including the County of Monterey Health Department, Soledad Farm Labor & Affordable Housing Units, and Stanford and Salinas Valley Memorial Healthcare Medical Office.

With over seven years of experience, Simoni has developed an extensive portfolio of commercial and residential work. She has a history of successfully managing multiple projects, leading in-house project teams while balancing client and vendor relationships and procuring interior finishes, fixtures, furnishings and fabrics.

As an interior designer, Simoni brings a passion for functionality in the spaces she helps create. She acknowledges that life can be hard but said individuals can find some comfort and ease in a carefully planned space.

"I enjoy commercial design because it can touch a lot of people," Simoni said. "I find that to be a meaningful way I can make an impact."

Simoni joins WRD's Interior Design team that works with clients to help create business environments that reflect their vision and goals. The designs are practical, aesthetic, and customized for clients' intended purpose.
